ARCH angels*Nicola Thomas looks forward to all the green initiatives at The Eco Technology Show

This week sees us off to the all new Eco Technology Show at the all new Amex Stadium. Very exciting! The show is a couple of weeks after the Fat Boy Slim Big Beach Boutique – so they'll have had time for a good tidy up.

The show will be jam-packed with an eclectic mix of great exhibitors and speakers passionate about all things environmental, and you can expect to try everything from food and drink in the sustainable market to Segways and ETrikes.

There's something to inspire everyone; business owners and local residents alike, and lots of great information on money and planet saving schemes and incentives.

We'll be there showcasing our previous works and chatting to local residents about how they can make their home greener and more beautiful. Those of you who have been following our column will know that making Brighton's homes greener and more cost effective for their owners is one of our great passions and we can't wait to chat to some more locals.

We're especially looking forward to hearing Russell Smith from Parity Projects who we have worked with very successfully in the past, talk about SMEs and the Green Deal. If you're a local business owner, his talk on Friday is a must. Hawton Mead's stand is also a great place to find information and advice on lowering both the carbon footprint and fuel bills of your home.

The show runs from the 15th–16th June and tickets are £5 for adults with children under 16 free to enter.

We've got two sets of tickets to the show to give away. If you'd like the chance to win, follow us on Twitter @ArchAngelsBton and re-tweet our special message. We'll pick some winners at random – just be sure to come and say hello at our stand, W28.
